Questioning Strategies to Activate Student Thinking

Ms Tang Swee Noi has served more than 16 years in the education sector, with a wide-ranging experience from working with diverse learners in the Gifted Education Programme to students with special needs and learning disabilities in and out of Singapore. She had previously served in UNESCO, an international school in Indonesia, as well as a special education school, looking into various aspects of education development and management. Throughout her career, Swee Noi is engaged in curriculum planning and development, pedagogical development and process management. She has done presentations and conducted workshops on curriculum and pedagogy both locally and internationally.

Synopsis of Workshop

When planned and executed in a strategic manner, classroom questioning has high potential for engaging all learners in thinking and speaking related to learning goals. This 3-hour workshop seeks to provide participants with tips and examples to help them develop questioning practices that motivate students and activate their thinking. Participants will become familiar with the ASCD Quick Reference Guides (QRG) on Questioning Strategies to Activate Student Thinking and have the opportunity to explore and apply questioning strategies used in QRG in the Singapore context.
